Testimonial

“In my early years, I felt little need to be trained in bible study and ministry, preferring to work in evangelism and support pastoral work instead. However, as time progressed, I was encouraged by other leaders to get further training, so I pursued biblical studies and other trainings. I was also encouraged to get some theological training, which involves Old and New Testament studies and other practical skills for ministry. This was where I hit my sweet spot in ministry.

However, my personal love of biblical studies has not been the only thing to benefit. As a leader I have become increasingly concerned about the effects of poor interpretation of scripture on the life of the Church, both locally and globally. By training leaders to avoid some of the common pitfalls in interpreting scripture and ministry practice, I believe that these problems can be managed and resolved. If we have a problem, the answer is in the Bible; we just need to understand it!

I would encourage any church leader or prospective leader to receive some in-depth training in biblical interpretation and leadership. Every Christian leader can benefit from further training in biblical studies and leadership.”
